"Account of my mother's habit, hiding her money in the oven at night for safety, she has burn eight dollars Sunday morning," writes a New Jersey correspondent to the Secretary of the Treasury, under a seal that also inclosed blackened ashes of burned paper. "I am sending you the ashes to see if you could help us; as mother is a widow and need the money badly. It was one five and single bills."

For there is the case of the widow's pig, which chewed up her money after finding its hiding place in the kitchen. And when the pig was cut open, the digested money was forwarded to the United States Treasury and the denomination determined without much much trouble.

So nothing is impossible to this expert.

ASKS UNCLE SAM'S BACKING.

A young man, a couple of years over his majority, applies to the Secretary of the Treasury to finance him in a usiness opportunity offered to him. He offers the security of his personal notes, and is willing to make it a shorttime loan. He asks for $2,000. He declares he can provide first-class refer-to Maryland Tributary. On her recent trip of inspection over waterways under the charge of Col. Newcomer, engineer officer in charge of the Washington engineering dis trict, the United States Army engineer service steamer Castle, visited Najemoy creek, one of the important undeveloped tributaries of the Potomac in Mary land.

Army Engineer Steamer Pays Visit

Soundings were made in the waterway from its mouth to Friendship landing, a distance of about five miles, and notes were made by the inspectors of work that would have to be done to open the stream in a proper manner to navigation.

Najemoy creek sends large quantities of wood and lumber to this city, and big barges load railroad ties for Philadelphia and other points there. There are no steamboat landings on the creek, but were it opened to navigation by steam vessels it is probable it would be added to the steamboat schedules out of this city.

COMET AT ITS BRIGHTEST ABOUT JUNE 10-12 NEXT

Celestial Visitor Within 35.000.000 Miles of Earth to Be Visible to Southern Observers.

The Mellish comet, which is now the ente; of astronomical attention, as far s heavenly phenomena goes, is a short. fan-shaped celestial wanderer in the southern reavens, which was picked up last February by Prof. Mellish of the Lowell observatory. Computations of its elements show a tail composed of two divergent branches, in position angles 270 degrees and 295 degrees, one and a half and three-fourths degrees long, respectively.

comet has similar elements to the great comet of 1848, and computations bility of the identity of the two. The latest computations show that its perihelion passage will occur July 17, at a distance almost equal to that of the earth from the sun at the same time. Its predicted positions in the heavens from April 30 to May 24 have been estimated at $2,000,000 miles from the earth on April 30. 42 200 000 miles the earth on April 30: 42,000,000 miles May 24; so that it is approaching the sun at the rate of millions of miles a day, increasing its computed bright-ness six fold in this short time.

Some astronomers contend that this

The orbit of this comet runs through the eastern part of the constellation Sagittarius about ten degrees east of best be seen about 1 a.m. During the early part of June this comet may be a early part of June this comet may be a fine object for southern observers, as it will come within 35,000,000 miles of the earth. It will be at its brightest about June 10-12, when it will pass over the smaller Magellanic cloud, and be a southern circumpolar object.

As it recedes from the sun the orbit of the Mellish comet will be parallel with the neighboring part of the earth's orbit, so that the earth follows it for some time at a gradually int for some time at a gradually in-creasing distance. It will probably be creasing distance. It will probably be easily vesible to southern observers for many months. It will, in all events, also become telescopically observable again in northern latitudes before it fades away in the distance from our
